Manhunt looks like a scene from a police movie

LANCE CROSSLEY
Staff Reporter

There was an elaborate manhunt for a suspect that fled from police in the area of Gooderham and Irondale last week. After successfully evading at least three police officers on Wednesday night, the suspect was believed to have disappeared into the forest off Cty. Rd. 503.

Police apprehended the suspect, a 32-year-old man from Barrie, yesterday, although they have not revealed exactly how or where he was caught.

The otherwise quiet area of Highlands East quickly turned into a dramatic spectacle worthy of a Hollywood film. Dozens of police officials set up a command post. A number of locals were stopped on the road for questioning. A police helicopter scoped the lands from overhead. And camouflaged tactical response unit officers applied green face make-up before pursuing the fugitive in the foliage.

The incident occurred Wednesday afternoon when, according to a police press release, an officer from the Haliburton Highlands OPP detachment tried to stop a vehicle near Gooderham. The vehicle ignored the officer and fled the scene. Two other OPP vehicles came to provide backup but were damaged in the pursuit. Three officers were taken to the hospital with minor injuries.

O.P.P. spokesperson Mark McMaster confirmed rumours that shots were indeed fired but did not elaborate on who fired what. The Barrie man is being charged with attempted murder and mischief endangering life. He is expected to appear in a Lindsay court sometime today.

The Ontario Provincial Police's Tactical Response Unit and Emergency Response Unit personnel were called in to search for a man who fled into the bush near Millburn Road in Irondale. The suspect, who has been charged with attempted murder, was not found until yesterday.

Coleman Lake residents angry over 'breach of trust'

LANCE CROSSLEY
Staff Reporter

Coleman Lake residents are angry at what they believe is a breach of trust on the part of Dysart et al council.

The issue revolves around an agreement the two sides once reached in regards to a dispute over a proposed gravel pit on Coleman Lake Road.

"It seems to me that when you make a deal, you honour the deal," said Coleman Lake resident Gordon Cressey at council's planning and roads meeting last Monday morning. "The deal has not been honoured."

In 2003, an application was submitted on behalf of Linda and Paul Hebert to rezone 17 acres of their property for gravel extraction. A groundswell of opposition eventually led to a compromise between the municipality and the Coleman Lake and Redstone River Ratepayers' Association (CLRRRA). The agreement laid out a number of conditions for the Hebert gravel operation, promising CLRRRA's close involvement in the preliminary process as well as the future hours of operation.

The whole issue was thought dormant until residents learned about a June council meeting in which the Heberts and their lawyer came to polish their operator's agreement with the township. News about how far advanced the plans were came as a surprise to many.

"We figure that the whole agreement has been broken and that we were not involved like we were supposed to be," CLRRRA president Karl Feuerpheil told council.

Indignant Coleman Lake residents believe council has broken three points from their 2003 deal. The first revolved around a promise that Mr. Hebert would hire a qualified consultant to conduct an environmental impact study for his proposal and that council would consult with CLRRRA when approving the Mother and daughter sustain life-threatening injuries

Police are crediting booster seats with preventing three young children from sustaining serious injury in an accident which almost took the lives of their sister and mother.

The family was westbound on County Road 503 on Monday afternoon when their Dodge Caravan left the road about a kilometre east of Kinmount. It then struck a rock face.

The driver, 36-year-old Warren Fisher, has a badly broken leg. He was transported to Minden Hospital.

His wife Joanne, also 36, was airlifted to Sunnybrook health centre in Toronto with serious life-threatening internal injuries.

Their eldest daughter, nine-year-old Grace, was airlifted to the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto with serious life-threatening injuries.

First e-Bay, now there's WHaggle

THERE'S A NEW WAY to buy and sell goods the old-fashioned way: haggling. Osprey Media Group, which owns 59 newspapers across Ontario, including the Haliburton County Echo and Minden Times, has just launched wHaggle.com. Let's say you have something to sell. You list it on wHaggle.com and then haggle for a price with one or more potential buyers in real time. When you get the price you want, the transaction is made. The fees to use the service start at $4.99 and features include being able to add a photo or moving a listing to the top of the page in its category. Shoppers can search for items by category. Visit www.wHaggle.com to see if there's something for you.

Congratulations to Haliburton Highlands Secondary School graduate Chelsea McKelvey, one of 15 Fleming College students to receive the college's Academic Excellence Scholarship. Chelsea is in Fleming's business administration-human resources program. Established in 1998, the program recognizes academic achievement amongst students in the local school board districts as well as students who have excelled academically in specific disciplines. The scholarship provides each recipient with $2,000 towards one year of full-time study.

On Friday, October 14, Open Stage will be part of the Hike Haliburton Festival. Join in the fun at the Fish Hatchery on County Road 1. The Blast Off barbecue runs from 5 to 8 p.m. for $5 a person; Open Stage starts at 8. It promises to be a great evening. Be part of the audience or perform on stage. Performers will sign-up upon arrival. Serendipity is host for the evening.

Nelcia and Gord King are hosting a Moore Falls Fright Night in aid of the Minden Food Bank on Hallowe'en, Monday October 31. 1028 Green Gables Rd. is where ghouls lurk, witches brew, ghosts haunt and vampires fill the night starting at dusk. The house is 800 ft. off Hwy 35 in Moore Falls, 17 km south of Minden. It's free admission with a non-perishable food donation.

Settlers' Village in Bobcaygeon is presenting a Haunted Village on Saturday, October 29 from 6:30 to 9 p.m.. Attractions include a haunted carriage house, haunted house for small children, crafts, bobbing for apples, face painting and ghost stories around the campfire. Wearing costumes is encouraged. Motorcyclist clocks in a 206 km/h

Officers from the Haliburton Highlands OPP detachment were kept busy over the weekend answering 80 calls for service.

The calls included motor vehicle collisions, break and enters, thefts, liquor violations and driving complaints.

Several people were charged with Highway Traffic Act violations, which included numerous speeding violations ranging from 126 km/h in a 60 km/h and one driver on a motorcycle being charged with 206 km/h in a 60 km/h zone. When stopped by the police the driver stated he felt he should get a break since it was his birthday.

Thieves appear to be targeting small horsepower out-board motors. Members of the public are reminded to write down serial numbers or mark their property with some type of identifier, as this can be a valuable asset in the recovery of stolen property.

Three girls spared injuries

However, the three youngest children – Emma, 7, Megan, 2, and Avery, 18 months – escaped with only minor injuries. Emma was in a booster seat and Megan and Avery were in car seats.

The cause of the accident is under investigation. Meanwhile, the driver of a vehicle involved in an accident on Hwy. 118 near the 25th Line in Stanhope sustained only minor injuries on Sunday. The OPP says he was following a vehicle going west when the first vehicle signaled it was turning left and then turned right. The driver of the second vehicle took evasive action and went into the ditch before returning to the road. The first driver stopped and then drove away.

Wilberforce has reason for thanks

Wilberforce Elementary School hosted its annual Thanksgiving feast on Friday, Oct. 7. Students (from left) Sean Baumhour, Bethalin Callfas, Niki Wingrove, Blake Aylsworth, and Cody Mullen relished in the meal that was served by Bob Orr, chairman of the Trillium Lakelands District School Board and Principal Birdie Murphy. The lunch included three turkeys provided by the school, buttered rolls from Jk./sk., cheese and pickles from Grades 3/4, apple juice from Grade 5s, rice crispy squares from the Grade 6s, and other assorted foods from every class in the school. The turkeys were cooked and sliced by parents Melanie Lewis, Debbie Cachia, and Laura Casey. The school also thanks Lori Drew, Lewis and Carol Lee for their help on the day of the event.

Students make buses a little safer

LANCE CROSSLEY

Staff Reporter

Local school buses just got a little safer.

More than 40 new recruits from Grades 6 to 8 reported for training at Camp Adelaide on Thursday to learn about bus safety. This will be the first year Haliburton County has ever had bus patrols.

"It's good to have a good role model on the bus. Sometimes kids forget that the bus is an extension of the classroom," says Patricia Hayward, area transportation officer for Trillium Lakelands District School Board.

Hayward says that bus patrols have been in Muskoka for at least 15 years and that the program is now being rolled over to Haliburton. The program is particularly welcome in light of a winter bus accident on South Lake Road in which a school bus slid on some black ice and flipped onto its side. No one suffered any serious injuries but the incident serves as a cautionary tale for potentially more serious scenarios.

"In that case, the driver was fine," says David Freeman, Laidlaw bus lines branch manager. "The driver was conscious and able to do the radio. But had the driver not been able to, then somebody else on board will now at least know how the radio works and have some semblance of an idea of what to do."

Along with learning how to radio for help, students are also taught how to open emergency windows and how to evacuate out the back. The bus patrol role also includes assisting the driver by helping little ones on and off the bus.

Hayward says they don't encourage students to get involved in reporting bad behaviour because it can create social problems when students encounter one another at school.

"The other thing is principals usually like to hear the report from an adult and they like an adult to have seen it,"

LANCE CROSSLEY/Echo

Eleven-year-old Archie Stouffer Elementary School student Connor Valentine is shown how to exit the back of the bus during bus patrol training at Camp Adelaide on Thursday. This is the first year Haliburton will have trained bus patrols for its school rides.

explains Hayward.

Ideally there are three patrollers per bus: at the front, in the middle, and at the back. Because Haliburton's program is still in its early stages, it's likely local buses will have no more than one or two patrollers for this year. However, the board plans to continue training next year as older students move on to high school and younger ones come through to Grade 6.

Young recruits were helped in their training by OPP Officer Mark McMaster and Cadet Kevin Windover. The training was divided into two 45-minute sessions: one theoretical and one hands-on where students are shown the bus's features and given physical demonstrations.

Afterwards the children were rewarded with a barbecue lunch.

"It's about safety," says McMaster. "It helps them take better control of the bus."

Students – who hail from Cardiff, Wilberforce, J. Douglas Hodgson, Stuart Baker, and Archie Stouffer schools – all must pass a written test to be designated as a bus patrol.

Police stop drivers during search for suspect

Police officials focused their investigative efforts on two particular locales. One was off Cty. Rd. 503, a couple of kilometres up McColl Road near the Gooderham landfill, where officers were guarding a 75-metre section of road encompassed in yellow police tape.

It is not yet known what occurred at this site, but it is thought it might have been the starting point of the incident.

Several kilometres down Cty. Rd. 503 on Millburn Lane, near Irondale, there were dozens of officers in what became a makeshift command post in the front yard of resident Bill Powell.

"It might be a zoo at the moment," said Powell, "but hopefully it will all get resolved."

Powell says the escape vehicle was ditched about 150 yards behind his house on a small trail off Millburn. At 6 p.m. on the day of the incident, Powell says he noticed a police helicopter hovering over his barn, frightening his horses. At about 10 p.m. police asked him if they could set up a command post on his property, which was up and running about 1 a.m.

On Thursday his lawn was littered with police vehicles, as well as reporters from the Peterborough Examiner, the Haliburton County Echo, and CHEX television.

At 4 p.m. two unmarked vans with tinted windows, filled with armed tactical units in army camouflage, were led by a police truck to an undisclosed forest access point.

Local residents knew something was unusual when they were stopped on the road for questioning. Caroline Sutherland, an employee at Irondale Country Store, says on Wednesday night her children were stopped by police on the way to their Irondale residence. She says her husband was stopped for questioning in Kinmount at 11 p.m.

According to a report in Tuesday's Toronto Sun, police were surveying a marijuana grow operation on McColl Rd. when a suspect driving a pickup truck started to pursue the officers. After back up arrived, says the report, the truck collided with at least once police car on a side road. The report also says officers opened fire on the truck and hit the vehicle several times.

"As far as I can say, the investigation is ongoing. As soon as further details become available I'll be able to release them," said Mark McMaster, OPP Media Relations Officer.

A drug warrant was executed on Thursday night at a residence on Madill Rd. but police have not said it is connected to last week's incident.

Where's the beef, CWY participants ask

PATRICK BYRNE

CWY Participant

For nine families in the Haliburton area, the price of groceries has dramatically increased. In addition to their food disappearing at a rapid rate, they have discovered their showers seem to always be occupied and their washing machines always full.

What has overwhelmed these typical Haliburton households? No, not a band of inconsiderate hobos. The nine Kenyan - Canadian counterpart pairs participating in the Canada World Youth program have graciously been accepted into the homes, and lives, of host families for their three-month stay in Haliburton.

When I learned who my host family was, I almost cried. During our orientation camp, the 18 of us sat eagerly awaiting information about our new families. The descriptions were read out: "the next family is Beth Johns and Norris Turner, four grown up children, one dog, oh yeah - and they're vegetarian." I snickered. My carnivorous nature kicked in and prompted me to say, "It would suck to be stuck with them."

In retrospect, I really should have seen it coming. Alas, fate dealt me a cruel blow and Jason Kasoo, my Kenyan counterpart and I were assigned to cohabitate for three months with Beth and Norris, the vegetarians.

Now before you begin to feel sorry for me, let me relate Jason's plight. Jason belongs to the Maasai tribe. Maasais are pastoralists, meaning they herd cattle. They do not plant vegetables. They eat meat. The look on Jason's face when we found out was priceless. However, despite our initial nightmarish outlook, things only improved from there. We learned that our new host "Mom and Dad" were not, in fact, the hardcore, 'cows-have-feelings-too' type of vegetarians. They even promised to buy us cold cuts for lunch!

Jason Kasoo of Kenya and Patrick Byrne of Acton, Ontario, two committed meat eaters, have been adopted by vegetarians Beth Johns and Norris Turner for the three-month Canada World Youth visit to Haliburton. Photo by Darren Lum

Once the bleak idea of a quarter of a year sans meat was removed from our minds, Jason and I discovered that besides our "Mom and Dad's" penchant for salad and tofu, they were actually pretty decent people (gasp). In fact, we now have a sneaking suspicion that there was a mix-up in the hospital nursery and we have only now, through mind-boggling odds, been reunited with our true parents! The one small problem with this theory is the indisputable blackness of Jason's skin and the glaring whiteness of our "parents".

Some of our responsibilities as new members of the family include washing dishes after our (vegetarian) dinner and making our lunches for the next day. Amid the splashing dishwasher, the explanations to Jason about how Canadians prepare food - 1. Open fridge 2. Unwrap package-, and the laughter, I have been made to feel completely at home with my new family. While many experiences with Beth and Norris have been very similar to my own family's lifestyle, I have also been exposed to many new things, namely a furry, four-legged one named Winnie.

Due to a childhood fur allergy, I never had a dog. While I was initially, and justifiably, afraid of being Winnie's newest chew-toy, I have learned to enjoy her company immensely. Having said that, I do draw a line with the level of intimacy I like to share with a member of another species. For instance, the other night I was minding my own business when Winnie came roaring into the room, and gave me her best "take pity on the poor hungry dog" look before proceeding to lick my hand. Then I made the mistake of turning to face Winnie. Before you could say, "I like you as a friend," Winnie's wet tongue had slopped across my face and into my open mouth. After screaming and clutching at my defiled tongue, I started to look at the situation a little more optimistically. CWY has a 'no exclusive relationship' policy, so it looks like that was the most action I'm going to get for the next 5 months.

Not everyone is able to put up with so much grocery shopping, occupied showers and full washing machines, not to mention two boisterous young men. Beth and Norris are extremely generous, loving individuals who have selflessly donated their home and time in order that Jason and I have a memorable experience in Haliburton. For this I thank them and forgive their staunch vegetarianism.

A compromise

ONE OF the advantages of being a community newspaper is that you can more easily gauge community standards. In other words, because you live in the same community as the people you are reporting on, you know what you can get away with.

However, over the past decade Haliburton has become a community of immigrants. The newcomers aren't from other countries; instead, they're fleeing the traffic, noise and pollution of urban life. But like other refugees, they bring with them their own culture, a culture that sometimes doesn't have the same value systems as the ones found in the Highlands.

echo

editorial

martha perkins

This time of the year, one such clash becomes apparent. Hunting has been a way of life here for generations. At first it was an absolutely essential way of providing food for the family. Today, the meat is still an important supplement to what's in the freezer but for most hunters, the recreational aspect is paramount.

However, hunting involves guns, and people who have moved here from the city aren't as comfortable with a gun culture. Not that our gun culture is the same as the American gun culture, but it's not uncommon for a Highlander to have a shotgun stored away somewhere in his house. A gun isn't a threat, it's a tool.

Given the success of this summer's Big Fish column, and having two writers who absolutely love to hunt, it seemed natural to ask Steve Galea and Bryn Weese to write a Big Fish hunting column. But how could we do it without offending those readers who didn't grow up with hunting?

The ground rules were perhaps a bit silly, but compromises often do have a bit of the ridiculous to them. We could show pictures of guns, but not pictures of guns shooting. And we could have a dead bird, but not a dead deer. Certainly there could be none of the traditional shots of a hunter kneeling in the woods while propping up the head of a deer he just shot. That would fall far outside many of our readers' acceptability limits.

It was, granted, a hypocritical premise for what the column could be about. You know why hunters carry guns? To kill things. You know how a venison steak gets "made"? A deer is shot. People who don't hunt know that but the trick is not to shove the reality in their face when they unsuspectingly opened their Echo.

Still, despite these rules, there are people who are bound to be horrified by our "glorification" of gun culture. There's something about the sight of two men wearing camouflage and blaze orange vests that manages to say much more than "here are two men taking a walk in the bush hoping that they may be able to shoot a bird but just content to be enjoying a fall day in the woods."

One thing you learn here is that hunting isn't about the gun. It isn't really about killing something either. It is the camaraderie of the camp, the excuse to be outside as dawn arrives, the time to be alone in the woods with your thoughts. Yes it's nice to have something to show for your efforts, and the meat and game that's put on the dining room table is enjoyed and appreciated, but as with any other opportunity to take time off from the stresses of everyday life, it's the journey not the destination that's important.

So non-hunters, please do not be offended by our Big Fish boys this week. Hunters, please know that the compromises were made at the behest of their editor who once again is sitting on the fence and trying to appease the people on both sides.

Breaking up is hard to do

THE OTHER DAY I received very sad news from one of my hunting buddies. Apparently, he and his wife were about to split up for good. Needless to say, I was devastated.

"This is the same wife who inherited the 3,000-acre hunting paradise, right?" I asked as tears welled up in my eyes.

"The one with that great duck marsh?"

"Yes," he answered. "I only have one wife."

"Why? Oh, why?" I wailed, as the impact finally settled in. "Was it something we've done? If so, we'll change! Please tell her we'll change!"

"Steve," he announced, "it's nothing we've done. In fact, you have nothing to do with it at all."

"Are you sure?" I replied. "'Cause if I do, I'll send her roses and a card right now!"

"Yes," he said. "It's not our fault, I mean my fault. The truth is, I caught her having an affair with several of the neighbours. Then there's her gambling problem - she practically lives at the casino. And her violent temper hasn't got any better since she's started drinking again. To make matters worse, she doesn't want kids, hates all my family and friends, and insists that we only eat paper products and Tabasco sauce for dinner."

"Oh, for the love of God, man" I said. "Every marriage has its little difficulties. Give it some time, say to the end of this duck season, and see what happens. You'll thank me."

"She's already left. But only after she trashed the house."

"This is terrible," I replied. "You kids hardly gave it a chance."

"Actually, we've been trying hard for five years," he said. "Or at least I have."

"Five short hunting seasons..." I mumbled as I dapped away a tear.

bled as I dapped away a tear.

We stopped talking for a minute and I let it all sink in. "Steve, are you going to be alright?" he asked.

"How can you mend a broken heart?" I whispered. "We'll never see that pothole in the cattails again."

"No," he said cheerily, "we won't."

"We had a lot of good times there didn't we?" I said as the tears began to flow freely.

"Remember how the mallards pitched in there last October?"

"Yes," he said. "That was about the same time I discovered that she had given all my possessions to a cult."

"You sure this won't work itself out right?" I asked. "It's not just a lovers' tiff?"

"Fairly sure," he nodded.

"Then have you... have you asked for permission to hunt at her marsh yet?" I asked feebly.

"Actually, she just sold the property to support her prescription drug habit," he said.

"Well, my friend," I said, "I know it's early, but I think it's time for you to move on. As hard as it might be to admit, that woman never really cared for us at all."

"Really?" he smiled. "I thought you'd see things my way."

"Yes," I said, "Now have you considered courting that nice lady who owns a large section of the trout stream over your way?"

"The one who dresses in garbage bags, yodels show tunes, and drools?" he asked.

"They say she's got a heart of gold..." I began. "Why else would someone care for so many cats?"

"I'll give it some thought," he said smirking, "but right now I'm kind of on the rebound."

"Take your time," I insisted. "You've got till April 25th."

Relative relatives

THE FALL SUNLIGHT STREAMED in through the dusty cottage window, spilling across the old wooden floorboards. Sophie could hear the distant churning of the river, its summer roar muted by the low autumn water level and the cottage's closed windows. The river sound, full of memories, was the perfect backdrop for what was taking place inside. Sophie was in the middle of a trip back and forth through time, something she would never have predicted only a few hours ago.

Before her sat her cousin Derek. He was deep in talk. Sophie could not call what was happening a conversation because that would imply a two-way flow of words. But in fact it was more a monologue with Derek the speaker and Sophie a willing listener. Sophie had not seen Derek more than perhaps five times in the last 25 years. Yet here they sat in the late afternoon light as Derek spoke of their parents, other cousins and events that had unfolded over the years since their childhoods.

The meeting had come about in a serendipitous way. While out for a walk at her cottage, Sophie had seen Derek puttering around outside his and, on a whim, she had stopped to say hello. Rarely had their paths crossed over the years and to be honest, neither one of them had gone out of his or her way to make it happen. Families are tricky, difficult things. Even the best of them can fall on hurtful times of misunderstanding, wounded pride and regret. Perhaps it was the beautiful September weather that made Sophie glad to be alive in such a lovely time and place. Possibly a perfect blue sky, before which crimson, gold and rust shouted out their colours, made her think about the glorious but brief nature of life. Or maybe she was simply feeling a little braver that afternoon and decided to take a chance.

Sophie could never have predicted the response. Later she would think it was like she had loosened the tap on a large barrel and all its contents poured out before anyone could stop it up again. For Derek had immediately asked if she'd like to come inside for a minute as he had something to show her. Just like that; as though they were taking up a conversation left off the day before. Of course she accepted with alacrity. Curiosity vied with surprise at the invitation.

Derek had taken up furniture refinishing and wanted to show her his latest efforts. However, it gradually dawned on Sophie that this was simply an excuse to engage her in further talk, to cause her to linger a while. Sophie looked about the old cottage, a place she had not been for decades. Much was unchanged. After admiring Derek's handiwork, she accepted the can of pop he offered and took a seat across the room from this cousin she was once so close to.

Sometimes a first cousin can look like a person's sibling, the genes so arranged. However, no one would ever mistake Derek for Sophie's brother. But he could be mistaken for her father thirty years previous. Sitting there, watching the way he lifted his eyebrows, a turn of phrase here, a shrug of shoulder there, she felt her father had come back. Derek was so engaged in his tale about their uncle's illness that he did not notice the scrutiny to which he was being subjected. Sophie was awe-struck.

After a while she regained her inner composure and was better able to focus on Derek's talk. Like a windup toy, he was starting to slow down - at least enough for Sophie to throw in a question. Was aunt so-and-so still alive? Was this person and that still married? Whatever happened to cousin what's-his-name? Derek was a fountain of information and Sophie drank in all the family news and gossip she could. As they talked, it seem to Sophie that the years both slipped away to inconsequence and yawned wide as a chasm. She wondered how they could do both, but so it seemed to her.

Then she realized that she was still Sophie and he was still Derek and they had shared much through their formative years that was as ingrained as growth rings on a tree. Later they had each branched in separate, different directions as they lost limbs, fought disease and pests and twisted to reach the light. They were the same and different.

The growing dimness told Sophie the afternoon was almost over and she had to get back to her own place and start dinner. As she began to take her leave, wondering how long it might be before she and Derek again shared time together, she realized he was talking about the Thanksgiving weekend. Some of the cousins were planning to get together for drinks and a catching up. Perhaps Sophie would be able to drop by for a little visit. It had been so long.

She made no promises. After all, anything could happen between now and then and she did not want to commit to something and then not be able to follow through. She was also a bit nervous at the prospect of walking into a room full of relatives. It was one thing to take that step with Derek; but Sophie might need some support to meet more of the old gang. Perhaps her sister would be willing to go with her. Who knows, she thought, making her way back to her cottage; it might be just the right day for a walk down memory lane.

pic of the past

Back in the spring of 1947, 14-year-old Murray Schrader took a break from the demands of making maple syrup in the woods near Gelert. He was helping his brother Gren, who had used a team of horses to break a trail through their grandfather's property. The sap was boiled in two cast iron kettles hanging from a beech tree branch. Our thanks to Gren for the photo.

Haliburton is a community that cares

To the Editor:

If ever there was an outstanding example of "Community Care" in Haliburton, it was during Community Care's 25th anniversary gala at the Wigamog Inn.

Towards the end of a wonderful evening, my wife Joan took ill and became unconscious. Within seconds, she was carried out into the lobby and gently placed on the floor. Dr. Heyes, Dr. Hartwick and MPP Laurie Scott, who were also at the gala, immediately attended to Joan.

Minutes later the paramedics arrived and the professional, caring response of Deeno Pearsell and his partner all helped to revive Joan and take her to the Haliburton Hospital.

At the hospital, she was immediately attended to by Dr. Gammon and the nursing staff, all of whom calmly assured a very anxious husband that Joan would be well taken care of.

Joan was discharged the next morning and all I could think of was how truly blessed we are to live in Haliburton, to see Community Care at its finest! To everyone involved that night, my sincere thanks and grateful appreciation.

Extendicare is a great place to call home

To the Editor:

On September 20, we attended a Hawaiian dinner given in honour of the volunteers of Extendicare, Haliburton. The food was prepared by the home's staff, and was absolutely delicious. Barbara Menzies, activities director, is to be commended for her efforts in organizing this event every year. She always goes above and beyond to show appreciation to her volunteers.

Each time we entertain at Extendicare, we are very warmly received, and are always made to feel welcome and appreciated by all the staff and residents. The residents of this county are very fortunate to have a great facility like Extendicare to call home. It is evident to us that they are happy and receive the very best of care.

It is our privilege to provide entertainment for the residents of this county in our long term care facilities, and our hats are off to everyone at Extendicare for such a wonderful evening.

Trail symposium postponed

To the Editor:

The Community Rail Trail Symposium that was planned for October 16 has had to be cancelled. This is because of the death of my mother.

However, it is hoped that the four speakers will be able to present their material individually in a series of smaller events over the upcoming months.

Oh, to be a 15-year-old birthday girl in Argentina

Really big parties are one of the things Amanda Lytle has discovered in her Rotary exchange trip

AMANDA LYTLE

Haliburton Rotary Exchange Student

Hello Haliburton County, from Olavarria, Argentina! Well, it's been almost six weeks in Argentina for me, and I can't believe it! Time has been flying, and I am having an amazing time!

Yes, as is expected, I do miss home... and especially my family and friends. But, you know what? I don't want to come home yet! I am having the time of my life, along with the ups and downs that are expected for every exchange student.

Some ups include a day at the ocean with Rotary, a day at my host family's farm - with horses! - and hanging out with my friends at a park in the centre of town. But with the ups, there are downs, such as being attacked by a German shepherd on the second day, having problems at the bank that frustrated me so much I burst into tears, and the language barrier. I am taking Spanish classes outside of school, and my English teacher at the school makes me do the same work - but in Spanish! She is terrific. She is helping a lot, and will help me whenever I need it. The support here is incredible. Everyone is willing to help me!

My flight here was long - with an hour stopover in Santiago, Chile. Flying over the Andes was really interesting, and I took some pictures! Beautiful! I met up with a really nice lady who was flying home to Chile.

She had been in Toronto for a week on vacation. Toronto? That's not so quiet for a vacation, but okay! I wish I could have seen my own face when we first started talking, and I asked her where she was going. She said Chile. Because I had been told that the flight I was on was a direct flight to Buenos Aires, Argentina, I thought I was going to die! She must have read my face, because she quickly told me that every other day, the flight course changes from Toronto-Santiago-Buenos Aires, to Toronto-Buenos Aires-Santiago! Thank GOD! I was okay!

The culture here is different but many things are the same. For example, when you greet someone, no matter if you've known them your whole life or have just been introduced, you kiss them once on the right cheek. It has the same meaning as a hand shake, but is much more "friendly!" Men occasionally shake hands, but they greet each other the same way, too. Another cultural thing, maybe just a custom, you ALWAYS wear your shoes in the house! No matter if it's your house, or your friend's cousin's house, you always wear your shoes. I didn't think much of that, because I love being in socks or bare feet. I'm not one for shoes. I compromised, and bought some slippers.

Food here is amazing, and the meat is FANTASTIC! There are so many different ways the meat is prepared, and eaten, too, such as with bread, or chopped into pieces, or just slapped on a plate. I have not had one bad thing here yet! Dinner usually is eaten around 9:30-10:00, which puts you into bed around 10:30 p.m. or so, and then school starts at 7:30 a.m.! Early! That's another thing - I haven't got much sleep here, but I am becoming accustomed to it.

I live about 15 blocks away from the centre of the city, where shopping for anything and everything can be done. Just outside the centre is my school. A private school called Caneva, after the man who started it. It has about 500 students, and is MUCH different from ol' Hal High! Much smaller, classes are run much differently, no textbooks, small classrooms, about a third the size of ours, with the same amount of people! There are three floors, but each floor is not big. I like it.

So far, everything here has opened my eyes, everything from prices (cheap), to the ways that people live, and the conditions they live in. My host family took me for a tour around the city about three weeks ago. On the edges, people literally live in small square rooms, made out of large bricks, with scrap metal for roofs, held down with rocks. The windows don't have glass or curtains - instead, piled rocks to prevent people from looking in. Brutal! I couldn't believe it, but instead of commenting harshly out of disbelief, I just sat back and tried to take in everything I could.

The landscape here is FLAT! So flat! In all the car trips we've taken since I've been here, we haven't gone over ONE hill! When you get to the country, you can see forever. I have described it as similar to looking out onto the ocean - you can't see where it ends, or anything that even gives you an idea. You can't see the other side, just a flat line of the land that meets the flat line of the sky.

The streets: no matter where you look, you see a dog! There are so many dogs in the streets. I don't know who they belong to! There is a small dog that lives next door, and barks all the time. He sounds angry. I think it could be because he only has three legs! Poor dog! The other was apparently bitten off by another dog.

The roads have many bumps and potholes in them. They are dirty, as littering is very common. I know, I wondered why, too! It's nothing to finish a chocolate bar and throw your garbage on the ground! I don't agree with that, and keep my garbage with me until I find a can to put it in! Why litter? I don't get it.

The houses line the streets, and aren't much more than a metre and a half from where the cars drive! The houses are all one long building, divided by walls. Some houses are SO plain, just a white building with some windows and a door. No bricks or any exterior decorations. Every window has shutters that are closed every night, or wooden curtains that are pulled down and locked closed. Every house has an alarm.

Anyone reading this turning 15? If so, maybe you should celebrate it like an Argentinean! Why 15? I don't know, but here's how it goes. You're turning 15. Months before your birthday you're out looking for a gown to wear, along with shoes, nice matching jewelry, and special make up. You also need a photographer and a DJ! You plan to invite not only your family, but everyone in your grade, and other people from other grades too, along with your friends, and even friends from other towns and schools.

When the big night comes, your friends arrive before you do, so they can greet you when your Dad leads you in by the arm (sounds like a wedding!). You are kissed, hugged, and congratulated by everyone, and then you have a dance with your Dad. Flashes of cameras go ALL night, and glamour shots are done, too. Towards the end of the dance with your Dad, your uncle, or Grampa steps in, then another man, then male friends, one after another! Then, the girls step in for fun!

Every guest is served dinner, and then the lights go out - time to dance! There is always someone on the dance floor. Another group of guests arrive around midnight, usually the people in the same grade who aren't as close of friends. The party goes until around 6 or 7 in the morning, can you believe it? I couldn't! They are only turning 15!!

Well, the parties are fun, let me tell you! I went to one the second week I got here with my friends, for a really sweet girl named Alisa - and am going to another next month!

This past weekend, I went to Necochea, about three hours when an Argentinean drives, but would take anyone I know about five hours! (They drive really fast, and the speed limits on the big highways are 130 km/h!) We were there for a Rotary meeting to discuss a trip to the south that we all have to opportunity to take.

In November, I will be taking a trip to the South of Argentina whale watching, visiting penguins, and seeing glaciers! I can't WAIT! I already want November to be here... it sounds incredible. Don't worry, I will update you all after that adventure!

Necochea is on the East Coast. The city is along a big beach... a beautiful beach! It was SUCH a nice day! After the meeting and lunch, we went on a tour around the city, and got to stop and take a look at the Atlantic! Hot sun, and an ocean breeze... the beach was SO flat, and wide! There were even couples walking hand in hand, and dogs retrieving sticks! Jeeps and pickups driving from end to end, and back. Very nice!

Hope all is well in Haliburton County! Miss you all... but I'm not ready to come home yet... this trip is JUST beginning!

Love ALWAYS, Amanda xoxo

PS - to anyone in Grade 12, at Hal. High. this year... have an awesome graduating year! Miss you all, so much! Every one of you!

HHSS grad makes waves with lake research

LANCE CROSSLEY

Staff Reporter

Dan Selbie can see stories in the dirt. The Haliburton native, currently finishing his PhD studies at Queen's University, is involved with some groundbreaking research that is capable of charting a lake's history through the analysis of its sediment.

He recently returned from a science conference in Beijing, where he made a presentation that reconstructed the last 6,000 years of salmon production in Tahltn Lake in northern British Columbia.

"That kind of blows the mind of any fisheries manager who is talking about the last 10 years to predict next year's run," says Selbie, who spends his time in paleolimnology, the study of lake history.

The sediment Selbie collects at the bottom of lakes serves as a material archives for the lakes' past activities. Extracting a core of sediment means scientists can analyze biological material such as algae, plankton, and other seemingly insignificant things that can reveal an astonishing amount of information about past environments. The different layers of the sediment form a kind of map of the ages. Especially important is the algae, which they use to tell them about past nutrient levels in the lake. The geo-chemical information also tells them where the nutrients came from.

"Pacific salmon spend their life cycle in lakes, rivers and the ocean," says Selbie. "They accumulate most of their body size in the ocean and bring back all these nutrients to the fresh water system. When they spawn, they die, and release those nutrients into the fresh water lakes, which are usually very nutrient-poor. The lake absorbs those nutrients and it is delivered into lake sediment."

In the study Selbie presented in China, he was able to use the Tahltn Lake sediment to determine fluctuations in its salmon population over the past six millennia. The research is creating a buzz because scientists know very little about what drives salmon population. What Selbie helped discover is that there are multi-centennial, even multi-millennial shifts in salmon production, in which salmon populations turn from a high period to a low period. The research may have important environmental and policy implications for our present time, which appears to be a natural low period for salmon population. In other words, over-fishing in these times may present disastrous consequences.

"We are now over-fishing these salmon in a way that has never been seen in the past," says Selbie. "If we are at a low

Encouraging today's youth

Nominations are now being accepted for the Ontario Junior Citizen of the Year Awards

The strength of our community lies in solid citizens. Today's youth are tomorrow's leaders. If you know a young person, aged 6 to 17, who is involved in worthwhile community service; a special person who is contributing while living with a limitation; a youth who has performed an act of heroism; or a 'good kid' who shows a commitment to making life better for others, doing more than is normally expected of someone their age — help us recognize their contribution — nominate them today!

Nominations will be accepted until November 30.

period in natural salmon production then we could potentially tip the balance [for the worse]. This work has shown fishing pressures have been substantial."

Interestingly enough, evidence shows there have been periods in history where salmon production was extremely low. Selbie says there was a period about 4,000 years ago that had lower populations than we've seen in the last 100 years of commercial harvest. Still, this is not to underestimate the effects humankind may have on existing salmon. In other studies, Selbie has demonstrated the remarkable accuracy of sediment analysis by pinpointing the exact onset of an area's commercial harvest and the resulting decline in fish population.

There are also implications for research on global warming. Scientists will be able to co-relate the history of a lake's fish population with other paleo-records to better understand how climate might have influenced population fluctuations.

"Paleolimnology is a pretty powerful tool for environmental assessment," says Selbie.

Selbie will be presenting his team's study at a fisheries climate conference in Victoria at the end of the month.

When Haliburton native Dan Selbie made a presentation at a Chinese science conference about the last 6,000 years of salmon production at a lake in northern British Columbia, he also took time for a bit of sightseeing, including this statue of Mao.

Coleman Lake residents feel betrayed study's terms of reference. A study has indeed been completed but without the knowledge of CLRRRA.

"There was no consultation with [president Karl] Feuerpheil or with Environment Haliburton," said Marilyn Rydberg, a member of both organizations.

Reeve Murray Fearrey apologized for the breach, attributing it both to a breakdown in communication and the fact that there was only one copy of the study available.

"We're not trying to hide anything," explained Fearrey, adding that residents were welcomed to comb over the study.

CLRRRA is also upset that they were not notified about the June meeting with the Hebert family. Fearrey defended this by saying it was only a regular council meeting and that council cannot inform everybody on every issue that is dealt with at its table.

The third point of contention is that council promised to consult annually with CLRRRA regarding the gravel pit

Marilyn Rydberg asked Dysart councillors why felt the need to hide an environmental study on a proposed Coleman Lake gravel pit. Council said they are not hiding anything and are making the report available.

issue, something Cressey said has not happened.

"If the deal has been broken three times, why will it not continue to be?" said Cressey.

Fearrey countered by suggesting that no significant activity has happened in the past two years to warrant such a consultation.

Another point of concern, which was also mentioned in the 2003 agreement, was the municipality's pledge to upgrade a bridge that crosses the Redstone River. The bridge is used by the municipality to access an existing gravel pit it owns adjacent to the proposed Hebert site. In an interview with The Echo the following day, Feuerpheil said residents have had to nail down the bridge's boards after municipal trucks have passed over it.

Some are worried the increased traffic on the bridge that would result from the new gravel pit. Reeve Fearrey agreed that the state of the bridge is unacceptable and that measures will be taken to rectify it.

When it comes to water, the expectations are clear.

If your drinking water is meant for public use, you must know for certain that it's safe.

Owners and operators of certain drinking water systems must now comply with the requirements outlined in Ontario's drinking water systems regulation (Reg. 252/05, June 2005).

If the general public has access to your drinking water, whether it's via taps, washrooms, drinking water fountains or showers, this regulation affects you. Some establishments included are restaurants, service stations, churches, arenas and seasonal residences (such as campgrounds and communal cottage developments).

Clean, safe drinking water is vital to our health. Do your part to protect the quality of drinking water in your community.

Good friends, fabulous colours

The parka, the chairlift, the chalet and the cold were all there at Sir Sam's Open House this past Saturday. The ski resort is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year and the open house provided visitors with the opportunity to learn more about the resort, enter into a draw for a premium parking spot, enjoy good friends, good food and a taste of what this year's season will be like. With the chairlift in operation, taking guests to the top for a view of the fall colours, the only thing missing from the open house was the snow.

There are over 300,000 small enterprises doing business in Ontario today. Together, they employ more than half the province's workforce and generate over $120 billion annually. Curling Club has really big plans

WENDY VERMEERSCH

Special to the Echo

The Haliburton Curling Club announced last week that it plans to expand the existing building.

In a special meeting for all the members, President Chester Howse requested their support for the proposed plan that would double the size of the main floor club room and lower floor locker room areas. There will be wheelchair accessibility and complete new heating and air conditioning systems.

Howse went on to explain that with the growing membership over the past ten years it leaves the club no choice but to expand. In a show of hands members voted unanimously in favour of the plan.

The blueprints are progressing and as soon as they are complete we will be going to tender with construction planned for the spring of 2006. Howse also told the members that the executive committee would begin fundraising as soon as the final estimates are known.

The curling season for 2005-2006 is slated to begin on Monday October 17 and all members will be contacted shortly by their skips.

See you on the ice.

Get up close and personal with nature on your choice of 33 guided hikes during this weekend's Hike Haliburton festival.

History, nature, music, art, fantastic viewpoints, and wetlands - you name it and there's a walk or hike you'll like on October 14, 15 and 16.

Last year more than 1,000 people attended, so join other outdoor enthusiasts for a fabulous weekend amidst the rolling beauty of the Haliburton Highlands. This ever-growing festival offers 33 guided hikes and activities designed for all interests, ages and abilities - even for entire families.

This year's hikes include llamas, geocaching, geology, music, old growth forests, photography, bogs and B&Bs. Travel the Ganaraska Forest, ride a horse, visit waterfalls or take a treetop tour.

Offered again this year is a wheelchair accessible trail, and several hikes are back by popular demand such as the hilarious "Scoop on Poop", complete with its very own song!

Themed hikes for all ages and abilities will take place all over the county on private trails systems and Crown Land. Each walk is asking only $2 per person donation (all donations welcome) and all are led by knowledgeable and interesting guides. Best of all, there are no bugs and the leaves will be spectacular.

Friday night features a family BBQ and Night Hike as well as open stage music performances by some of the Highlands' best kept musical secrets.

On Saturday night, Toronto band Coyote Wild will work out the kinks at the Silent Auction and "Blister Ball" Dance.

"Our phone is ringing off the hook with people making plans to come to the area for the weekend. The fall colours are fantastic and we're expecting the weather to stay great," says Lindsay Elder, executive director of the host organization, the Haliburton Highlands Trails and Tours Network.

Senior soccer team's fortunes rest on finishing

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

HHSS 1
IEW 2

Getting chances wasn't the problem, it was capitalizing on them.

That's been the HHSS senior boys soccer team's challenge all season, says Head Coach Robin Gervais.

In the opening minutes against I.E. Weldon on October 3, the Red Hawks were poised to jump to an early lead, but the strikers weren't able to connect for goals despite finding open spaces behind the Wildcats' defenders.

Red Hawks forward Daniel Wright lunges for a loose ball deep in I.E. Weldon Wildcat territory.

The Red Hawks played a neutral, long-ball style of play, employing a 4 - 3 - 4 structure. From the midfield HHSS midfielders sent long lobbs for their quick strikers, but the several opportunities were never finished.

It wasn't until Red Hawks striker Guido Zanelle scored on a penalty shot that the team hit the score board. He gained the equalizer when the penalty shot was awarded after a Wildcat defender committed a handball in the box during a flurry of action. Zanelle's strike deflected off the goalkeeper's hands and into the net.

Early in the second the Wildcats caught the Red Hawks napping. A quick run down the side by a Wildcat forward sent a low cross, waist high, to a wide open striker just inside the box for a volley into the net — the go-ahead and game-winning goal.

Gervais said his team started well, but the team's aggression dropped off in the second half, creating the chance that resulted in the goal.

The Red Hawks tied the Wildcats 1 - 1 in the season opener and the loss is hard to live down.

"They'll end up playing the division championships," he said. "It hurts."

Gervais adds that many of the games have been close and the importance of this loss won't be known until the end of the season. He said his team is still learning "controlled aggression" this season.

HHSS nil
LCVI 2

After a recent road loss against LCVI (4 - 0 - 1), the team is taking stock of small fortunes.

"That was the only game of the season I didn't feel good about," says Gervais

Mathematically the team can make the playoffs. In the five-team division the Red Hawks have a solid chance after beating the winless St. Thomas Aquinas Titans.

Barring a win from the Titans the Red Hawks can expect to play the top-ranked Spartans again in the first round. Gervais said his team must improve if the team has any chance of getting past the first round. He wants the team to end its habit of not capitalizing.

"That's been the general trend. We've had lots of chances, but can't finish," he said.

The Red Hawks are now 1 - 1 - 4.

HHSS will host the St. Thomas Aquinas Titans at 2:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 13.

Red Hawks' reign over Titans continues

DARREN LUM

Staff Reporter

HHSS 46
STA 23

It was raining dueces for the HHSS senior girls basketball team when the Titans came to town on October 4.

The Red Hawks dominated St. Thomas, spreading the ball around for easy looks at the basket to win 46 - 23, improving to 1 - 2 - 0 on the season.

It was the Titans' loss in their young season.

In the opening quarter both teams committed several turnovers, leading to an exciting, if not low-scoring opening, with the game tied 4 - 4.

Led by the scoring of forwards Kirsten Rae and Michelle Neumann with key rebounds from Natalia Rico, the Red Hawks ran away with the game with an 8 - 1 run with 2:37 left in the first half. The Titans lowered the deficit to two points, stringing together five unanswered points with less than 40 seconds left in the first half. Red Hawks point guard Julie Johnson, with only 12 seconds, scored off of a short jumper at the top of the key, fed by teammate Rae, who was falling after grabbing the rebound from a startled Titans defender. The lead was back to four points, 14 - 10. Johnston ended the half with a lay-up off the glass in the dying seconds for a six-point lead, 16 - 10.

The Red Hawks came out with a lack of focus. The team was fortunate to not get scored on despite committing several turnovers two minutes into the second half.

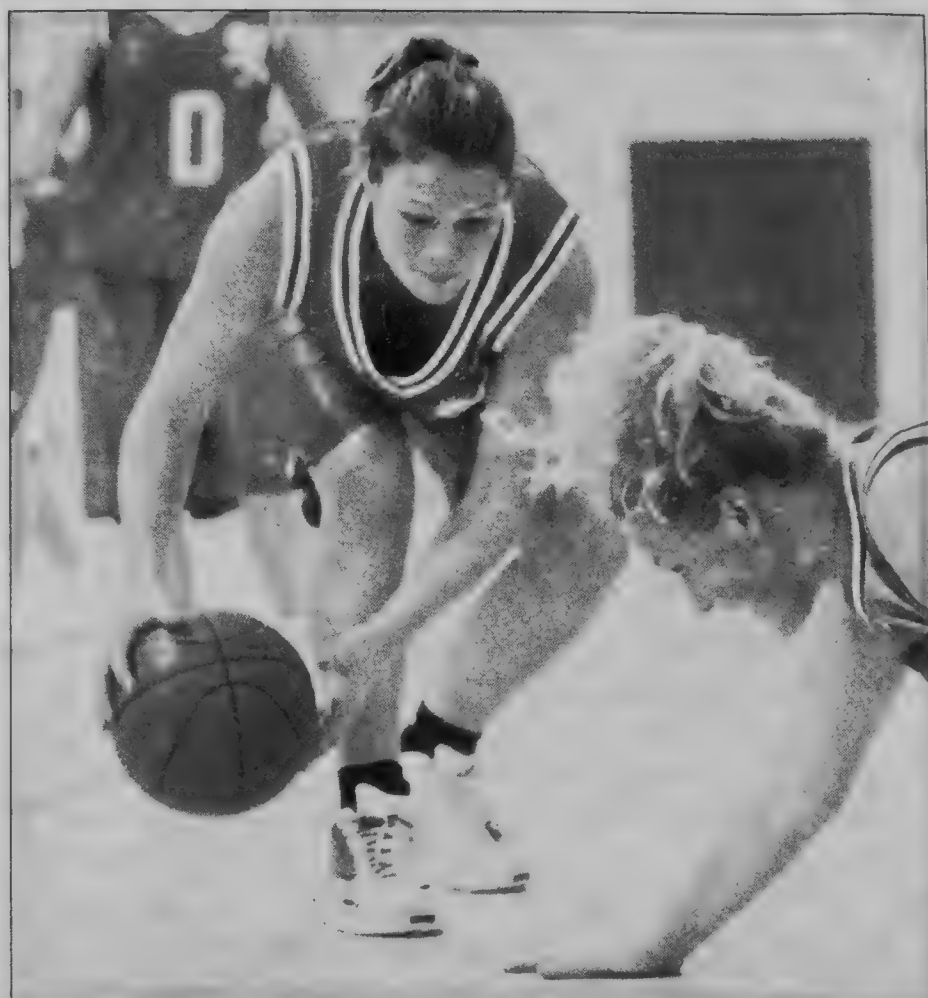

Re-energized by point guard Johnston, the Red Hawks took control again when she scored at 6:43 of the third, extending the lead to eight points, 18 - 10.

At 3:09 of the third the Titans narrowed the gap to two points, 20 - 18, but forward Rico's rebound and score ensured a two-basket cushion.

HHSS didn't look back as they ended the quarter up by 12 points, 30 - 18.

The final frame became a one-sided affair as the Red Hawks kept possession and frustrated the Titans with ball distribution and movement.

Johnston led all scorers with 12 points while forward Natalia Rico pulled down seven rebounds. Centre Michelle Neumann finished with 11 points.

New Head Coach Nathan Johnson is growing with the team, adjusting to his new role as head coach. He said he's used to being the assistant coach, showing players how to shoot better or attain stronger positions on the floor. The players, he adds, were well coached on running strategies so he doesn't have to worry about that part of the game.

Forward Robyn Ketner expressed her confidence in the team.

"The plays came together and we worked together as a team," she said.

The first-year coach said point guard Steffy Mackenzie and Jesse Dixon performed well. Mackenzie jumped into the position when back up point guard Sherry Walker missed the game due to other commitments. Johnson liked her decisiveness and how she distributed the ball.

The coach liked the improvement Dixon has shown since the start of the season.

"She stepped [up her play]," he said.

Coach Johnson wants the team to concentrate on one thing. "The important thing is that they're having fun," he said.

He adds it'll take some time before the players get used to his coaching style.

Johnson said he wants to get everyone playing and most of the players will have to adjust to the different playing times.

"It's a challenge. It'll be slow at first," he said.

Waste Reduction Week

The council for Municipality of Highlands East has declared October 17th to the 23rd, 2005 Waste Reduction Week in Highlands East!

Doing your part to reduce waste is as easy as A, B, C:

Always shop with waste in mind - choose products with as little packaging as possible and bring along reusable bags to reduce the amount of solid waste you generate.

Be smart with your water use - take only what you need.

Conserve energy resources - turn off unused electrical appliances and make sure the lights are off when you leave a room.

Remember: Waste comes in all shapes and sizes. Do your best to reduce waste this week and every week to keep your municipality beautiful!

Red Hawks take second place in Kawartha West basketball

LANCE CROSSLEY

Staff Reporter

The junior girls are getting it done with the basics. After a less than stellar 2004-05 season with only one win, the HHSS junior girls basketball team has strung together two wins in a row (2-1-0) for second place in Kawartha West this year.

Their last game, when they dominated the St. Thomas Titans, ended 40 - 28 in front of a partisan crowd of family and friends at HHSS.

The team's confidence is soaring after this win and the earlier come-from-behind victory against Fenelon Falls. Trailing by one point in the fourth quarter the team won 24 - 20. The Red Hawks carried this victorious feeling into the Titans game.

The Red Hawks fell behind only once. It was in the first minutes of the game when they trailed by two points, 2 - 0. They took a nine-point lead into the second half break.

Early in the half the Titans broke part of that lead with a 7-2 run. By the two-minute mark the run was killed. Point guard Ashleigh Schollig flung an inside pass to forward Erin Nicholson for an easy shot off the glass to reclaim the momentum and to extend the lead to six points.

The momentum continued for the Red Hawks, who strung together several unanswered points finishing the third quarter with a strong lead, 30 - 16.

The strong quarter proved to be important. It gave the Red Hawks enough of a cushion to fend off the last Titans push. St. Thomas outscored the Red Hawks 12 - 10.

Head Coach Karen Gervais is encouraging a "back to the basics" approach and wants the team to keep things in perspective despite the early success.

"We never assume we're going to win [entering a game]," she said. "We always play our hardest to win."

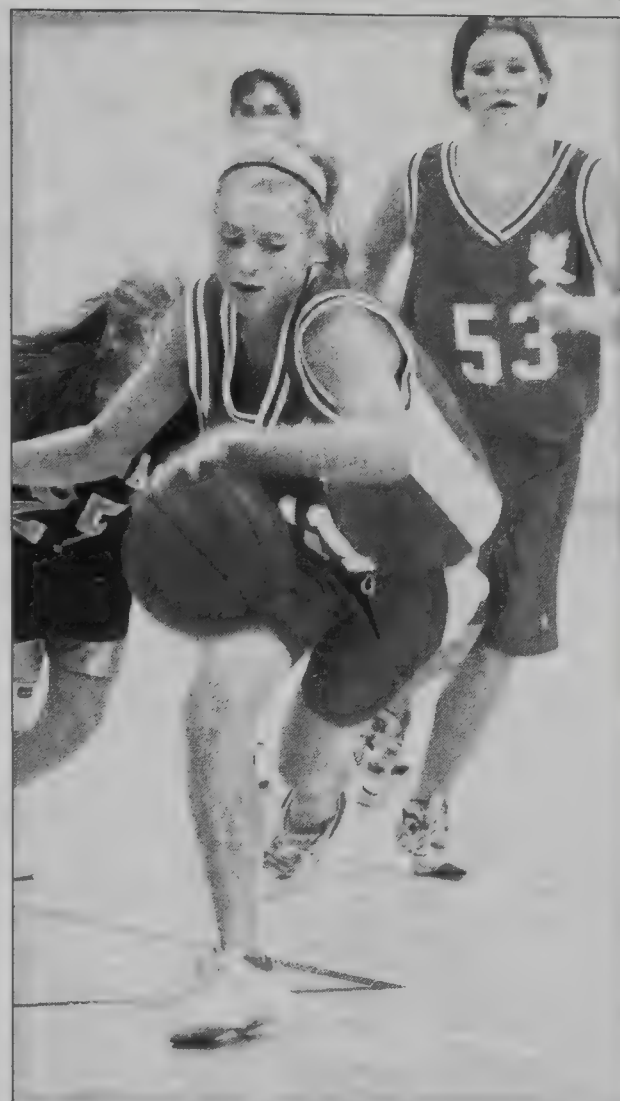

She said with five returning juniors, the younger players have benefited from the veterans' guidance and examples on the court.

Last year the team earned its lone victory against the Titans. Every game against them last season was tough and this season isn't any different.

"St. Thomas is a school of our size. It always works out that way," Gervais said.

Red Hawks point guard Meghan Bottum fights for a loose ball against a Titans defender.

Katlyn Hollands races for the net while Erin Nicholson tries to keep a St. Thomas player at bay. The Red Hawks earned their second win in a row, defeating the Titans 40 - 28. Currently in second place the team is 2-1-0. They play on the road tonight against I.E. Weldon.

TSW ends drawdown

The decline of the Haliburton reservoir lakes for the Trent Severn Waterway system slowed again last week. They now average 40.8 per cent of their respective full levels, showing a loss of only 1.8 per cent over the seven previous days.

Only low flows continued to be drawn from these lakes this week, due to reduced losses. The 30-year average for October 3 is about 43.5 per cent.

The Kawartha Lakes declined somewhat this week then held slightly above the long-term mean for the time of year. The Otonabee River flow was decreased after reducing the lake water. This has been reduced to near minimum again which is only about one-third of the normal October flow.

This will be the TSW's last weekly newsletter for 2005. The navigation season ends Wednesday, October 12.

The Big Fish hunters Steve and Bryn searched high and low for dangerous game in Haliburton County. Protected only with shotguns and the fearless Springer Spaniel Callie, they cautiously searched the ponds for menacing mallards and the bush for wickedly dangerous woodcock.

This woodcock doesn't look so dangerous. In the air, though, they have been known to strike terror into the hearts of hunters everywhere.

Out of Wilberforce

The Big Fish Boys are 'forced' to go hunting dangerous woodcock in the wild Wilberforce forests

Story by Steve Galea • Photos by Darren Lum

IT'S A SAD FACT that even in our newspaper office some folks kiss up to our boss, Editor Parsimonious Perkins.

In fact, if you happen to be a light sleeper during working hours, as I am, you'll hear people say things like "Sure boss, I'll do that assignment" or "I guess break time is over."

The truth is these keeners make the rest of us look bad. So, last week when Parsimonious called us into her office for yet another pesky assignment, reporter Bryn Weese and I decided to take a stand.

"I want you two to go hunting and then write about it," she said matter-of-factly.

"Heck no!" I replied indignantly as a matter of principle. "It can't be done."

"He's right," Bryn chimed in, in a mindless display of solidarity, "you ask the impossible of us."

"We're... only human," I postured, very much like Captain Kirk. "Just... human."

"Human!" Bryn laughed, "Who are you kidding, Steve? We're much less evolved than that!"

"That's telling her," I smiled while beating my chest with both fists. "Who does she think she is?"

"Hunting. Is she nuts?" Bryn said indignantly. "Hunting simply can't be done. Not in the time allotted."

"Hold it... Hunting? Did you say hunting? During work hours?" I babbled to Perkins.

"Yes," she replied, rolling her eyeballs.

"Oh, that's different," I smiled.

"Hunting we can do."

"Absolutely, we love hunting," Bryn conceded. "Do we have to write about it, too?"

"Um, yes," she added. "Go after dangerous game would you. We're way over on our staffing budget."

Minutes later we were planning yet another historic expedition.

"What's our spending allotment on this one?" I asked.

"Thirty-two cents!" Bryn beamed.

I scratched gun-bearers off of our list. Since they unionized, they're no longer a dime a dozen.

"Where to?" Bryn asked. "Africa, the Pampas, the Frozen North?"

"I'm figurin' somewhere in the GWA," I replied.

Woodcock! I don't need to tell you that the very word strikes terror into the hearts of man

from page 21

"The Greater Wilberforce Area?" he exclaimed. "But that's the home of one of the most dangerous animals on earth! Are you suggesting that we..."

"That's right!" I answered bravely. "We're going to bag a woodcock!"

Woodcock! I don't need to tell you that the very word strikes terror into the hearts of man. Why not? The bird is six ounces of feathered fury, known to charge without provocation! Its twittering rise from the alders is enough to make your blood run cold - for any bird that buries its bill into the dirt to eat worms, as woodcock do, is bound to be tough.

Now Bryn and I were talking about meeting one face to face on even footing, the bird and its long worm-eating bill against us, my dog, and two fully loaded twelve gauges.

The remainder of the day was spent saying goodbyes to our colleagues - mostly because it was an easy and dramatic way to dodge work.

Our expedition would begin with an early morning duck hunt so that we might warm up on our wing-shooting skills before entering woodcock country

"Meet me at my place at 6 a.m. sharp," I began.

"Are you kidding?" Weese replied. "I'll be there at 5:45."

I went to bed knowing that the next dawn might be my last. Sadly, that old line didn't work with my wife. Still, fear gripped the pit of my arms and, as I looked at my Luke Skywalker night-light, sleep came fitfully. The next day, I'd be slipping through the lowlands in pursuit of rogue woodcock - Ontario's most dangerous small game. Yes, it was hazardous work, but at least I knew I could count on Weese to be there to help me greet the dawn. His word was his bond.

Old farmlands often border great woodcock and ruffed grouse hunting. Look for thick cover surrounded by open terrain.

He showed up at 9:15.

"Uh, sorry," he said. "I slept in."

Lum arrived with him. And I was touched.

"Darren," I said, "you're going to risk your life and camera equipment to join us? Maybe I was wrong about you."

Lum shuffled his feet. Somewhere beneath that camera equipment a quiet voice said, "I was hoping you'd show me how to shoot a gun."

"Of course, we will," I said. "But it's a long, complex process. The first step is carrying the hunter's spare ammunition and other gear and referring to him as B'wana."

"Yes, Banana," he answered.

Lum was not a quick study.

Our expedition wound deep into the hinterland. Needless, to say, it was tough going. At times I almost felt sorry for Lum and considered allowing him to stop piggybacking me. Worse yet, Bryn had gone native.

"How are ya now?" he mused constantly.

Aside from that, we trudged along in relative silence until Lum asked, "Banana, why do we bring the dog?"

I got down from his shoulders so I could answer properly.

"Callie," I said, pointing towards my trusty hunting dog, "has a sense of smell that verges on incredible. Her nose is a fine instrument that can sniff out birds from great distances. It is a million times more sensitive than ours. Even now, she is working into the wind seeking out woodcock. That dog is single-minded and nothing will distract her."

Just then a great growling noise rumbled from behind us. My first thought was that we were being attacked by a hungry bear but then I realized that no bear smells that bad.

I turned to Bryn.

"Sorry," he said. "Couldn't help it... How are ya' now?"

I won't say that it had an effect on Callie's delicate nose but let's just say I've never had to call the fire department to get my dog out of a tree before either.

After that, Callie worked a little further ahead.

Then it happened.

She rushed into a thicket and a woodcock reared up and charged. I shot once but only in self-defence, missing on purpose, knowing full well that hitting that demon bird would only make it angry.

When it was all over, Bryn asked, "What was that?"

"A woodcock," I replied.

"But I thought that they were vicious..."

"Didn't you see how that one charged me?" I screamed. "I nearly got tickled..."

Callie flushed another straight to Bryn - its six-ounce form darkening the sky like some dragon of old. Trust me, it was terrifying.

Bryn swung his gun around to defend himself but, unfortunately, he stopped swinging when he realized that he'd have to shoot through Lum's flash unit to kill the bird.

Stopping on a bridge to jump-shoot ducks, the Big Fish Hunters spent the day in the Greater Wilberforce Area hunting dangerous game. Unbeknownst to most, mallards and woodcocks are very dangerous predators, certainly to plants and buds.

Thus ended our historic hunt. We might not have brought home game, but I think we found something even more important. For the first time, Darren, Bryn, and I bonded, as men often do when faced with the prospect of having to make up really good excuses. And I saw a change in Lum. Oh sure, maybe it was just the determined look in his eyes as he climbed that last hill with both Bryn and I on his back. But I'd like to think it was something deeper.

The very next morning I heard news that a rogue woodcock had entered a nearby village, ruining the crops and trampling several buildings. So Callie and I took to the outback once again and soon were hot on its trail. I remember it all as a blur. The dog charging. The bird rising and flying towards me. My eyes closing. The shot.

Next thing you know, Callie brought the lifeless beast to hand. Believe it or not, it looked harmless - actually quite appetizing.

That day village drums in Highlands East beat in celebration. And, as I brought the tiny bird home, my wife and kids ran ahead of me shouting, "Today the people will eat!"

Meanwhile back at the Echo, Bryn and Lum were telling stories of our adventure. They spoke of the birds that got away and accidentally became mired in the truth.

Fortunately, I saved them from further embarrassment by walking in with the vanquished woodcock and a far-fetched story, both slung over my back. I'm not saying I'm short, but the woodcock's bill dragged on the floor.

"How is this possible?" Bryn asked. "I've seen you shoot."

"Never mind that," Perkins said. "Write the story."

"Who said anything about writing a story?" I asked.

"Writing a story? It can't be done!" Bryn added.

"Yes, you ask the impossible of them," Lum added.

Perkins left in frustration; we thanked Lum.

"You know, I never did get to shoot those guns," he said.

Feeling that special bond once more, we arranged to meet him at the range at 6 a.m....

"Six a.m.?" he said.

"Don't worry," I replied.

"We'll be there at 5:45..."

Donations to support fish hatchery and other activities are now fully tax deductible

It was registered this year as a charitable organization under the Income Tax Act. Its primary purpose is to raise funds for the Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association (HHOA). Individuals and corporations can now make fully tax deductible donations to support the many activities of the HHOA.

Haliburton Gold Lake Trout sac fry.

The Haliburton Gold Lake Trout is unique in the world – it has a torpedo shape, compact size, strong fighting ability, excellent taste, grows rapidly and matures at a young age. Since the present fish hatchery opened in April 2000, it has raised more than 200,000 trout.

More than 50 volunteers contribute 10,000 -plus hours a year to the fish culture operation at the hatchery, which also includes Rainbow Trout, Brook Trout and Walleye. In addition, volunteers contribute hundreds more hours a year to operate the following programs on an annual basis:

Volunteers clean up garbage in areas of high traffic, such as public access points to lakes, nature trails and hunt camps. Glass, especially broken glass and nails and other sharp objects are important targets of these clean ups.

A black and white photograph of a deer's head and antlers, looking directly at the camera. The deer has large, velvet-covered antlers. The background is dark and out of focus.

Each year scores of hunting dogs go astray while on a deer or moose hunt. To aid in the return of these valuable dogs to their rightful owner, the HHOA has 20 dog pounds located within the Highlands where finders can deliver stray hunting dogs.

The goal of the Land Seeding Project is to provide early growth of clover and grasses to aid in spring doe and fawn survival.

Areas that have recently been developed or cleared for roads, hydro corridors or private construction provide optimal zones for seeding with a mixture of seed appropriate for deer.

For more information: call 457-9664, e-mail hhoa@on.aibn.com or visit www.hhoa.on.ca.

Tax deductible donations may be made by cheque payable to The Haliburton Highlands Resource Centre and mailed c/o Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association, P. O. Box 184, Haliburton, Ontario, K0M 1S0.

Awards event a celebration of top students

BRYN WEESE

Staff Reporter

The parade of students who walked across the stage at Haliburton Highlands Secondary School at Saturday's Honours and Awards ceremony are a testament to the school's dedication to excellence. Year after year, deserving students are honoured for their hard work to both academic studies and to school and community life.

Kathryn Verduyn, the director of education for the Trillium Lakelands District School Board, offered "sincere congratulations to the students on behalf of the board."

In total, $31,355 was handed out to hundreds of students and with the addition of seven new bursaries being awarded, the entire community, from private individuals to businesses to service clubs chipped in to make this year's honours and awards ceremony successful.

Wayne Cooper, chairman of the scholarship fund, thanked the many donors who made the day possible. Some donors give cash amounts for the annual awards; some have left bequests or given to the endowment fund, which now stands at about $350,000.

The presentation of Honours Certificates and Plaques, and of Perfect Attendance Awards for Years 1, 2 and 3 took place at an assembly held in the Athletic Complex, Friday, October 7, 2005.

Community hall beloved by so many

Fair board hosts another delicious Thanksgiving feast at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre

community news

Wilberforce

Hilda Clark
445-2018

Delicious turkey, steaming vegetables and homemade pies were welcome fare for diners this past Saturday evening at the Lloyd Watson Centre.

The Wilberforce Agricultural Fair Board and its volunteers are to be commended for all their work in once again serving their annual Thanksgiving Dinner to a good crowd of people. The meal was made even more satisfying served in a space so artistically decorated in an autumn harvest setting. Thanks to all who contributed to this successful event.

It occurs to me how special our community hall is for the people in this area. How well this large space adapts for various functions. Think of the uses that are made of this hall. Each group comes in and makes this basic place their own.

The seniors meet there every Tuesday; memorials, weddings and anniversary celebrations are accommodated; the school children use it for their indoor physical education classes; the Loop Troupe converts it to a theatre. And so the list goes on.

We may see things that need to be done to improve its maintenance and use. We may complain about sound systems and the acoustics. And why we wonder are there no simple brooms and mops left available to make the clean up easier. And what happened to the good old days when there was a drawer full of tea towels. We surely do care about this building and, appreciate its importance in the heart of community. Long may it flourish and be well used.

On Sunday, October 9, family and friends of Barry and Sharon (Barnes) Agnew gathered with them to celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. And what a gathering it was at the Lloyd Watson

The Thanksgiving dinner in Wilberforce last Saturday night was a great chance for families to get together. Mike Rupnow and his one-year-old daughter Ryan, of the Agnew's crowd, were two of over two hundred people who enjoyed the feast to celebrate the harvest. Photo Bryn Weese.

Centre. When you get the Barnes and Agnew families together it is bound to be a good time. Best wishes to Barry and Sharon for many more happy years together.

The Community Access Program (CAP) site at the library in Wilberforce is again staffed to help people learn about computers and the internet. Aaron Berning, who is very knowledgeable and helpful, is there to assist you for free. Just call the library to book a time or drop in during library hours. It's open Tuesday evening 6:30 to 9:00 and afternoons on Thursday (1-4), Friday (1-4) and Saturday (12 noon to 4:30).

This is a federal government program meant to help people acquire the skills to use the Internet. The CAP site is there all year when the library is open. People can use the internet on their own to send and receive e-mail and to search for information. With Aaron now back for a number of months help is available for those needing to get started or to solve particular problems.

Barbara Kyle, a highly acclaimed novelist, will be presenting two workshops on Saturday, October 22, for the Haliburton Highlands Writers' and Editors' Network and the Algonquin Writers' Circle. These workshops will be held at Club 35 in Halls Lake north of Carnarvon. The 9 a.m. to 12 noon session "The Heartbeat of Character" will deal with techniques for creating unforgettable characters. They will help you write short stories or novels "that spring to life with the kind of living breathing people that readers remember long after the story ends". The afternoon session (1 p.m. to 4 p.m.) will deal with "Storylining: Building Your Book."

The cost is $50. for the full day - two workshops or $30. for one workshop for members of HHWN. For non-members the cost is $60. for full day or $35. for half day. Visit www.hhwn.org for more information or call Kay Millard at 286-6635. I Don't hit that moose!

What you can do to help prevent hitting wild animals on the highway

One in every 18 motor vehicle crashes involves a wild animal.

This represents an 86 per cent increase over the past decade.

In 2003 alone, four people were killed, and 500 others hurt in over 13,000 collisions involving wild animals. The province hopes that a new brochure will raise public awareness and in turn, help save lives.

The Watch For Wildlife brochure offers drivers safety tips, including:

- Brake firmly if an animal is standing on the road, or about to cross. Never assume the animal will move out of the way.
- Never swerve suddenly. This could cause your vehicle to go out of control.

• Scan the road ahead from shoulder to shoulder. When you see wildlife beside the road, slow down and pass carefully as they could suddenly bolt onto the road. To reduce collisions the ministry has also taken several other steps, including installing fencing along major highways, better lighting, and posting warning signs where wildlife is known to roam.

"In some areas of the province wild animal populations are quite high, increasing the risk of collisions, particularly at night," said

Natural Resources Minister David Ramsay. "The MNR is taking action to better manage populations in these areas which will increase the safety of motorists."

"On average, a motor vehicle collides with a wild animal every 38 minutes. Ninety per cent of these collisions happen on two-lane roads in rural areas, during the spring and the fall mating season. We're helping to better prepare drivers this fall," says Transportation Minister Harinder Takhar.

The brochure can be found online at www.mto.gov.on.ca, in schools, Ministry of Natural Resources offices, Ontario Parks and local road safety partners such as police, public health and community groups.

It can also be obtained by calling 416-235-3473 or 1-800-373-5099.

BEST OF THE YEAR 2006 www.bonhardier-atv.com

'Because of the 30-06's inherent flat shooting performance, those long shots are made even easier'

The .308 Winchester

Used as the standard military round of NATO since its introduction in the 1950s, the 308 (also known as the 7.62 NATO) is a very popular round exhibiting all that is good about modern rifles cartridges.

Designed as a better round for automatic machine gun fire, the 308 is a comparatively short round which loaded better and jammed less than the long 30-06 casing. The short, stocky nature of the 308 cartridge allows for a very efficient burn of the gunpowder resulting in a very powerful round of ammunition (just slightly less than the 30-06) with far less powder.

Another advantage of the 308's short, stocky nature is that it is often chambered in light guns, perfect for carrying through the bush all day without the wear and discomfort of heavier firearms. Also, when chambered in a bolt-action rifle, the short bolt pull of the 308 provides very quick chambering of the next round for quick follow-up shots.

Like the bigger, slightly more powerful 30-06, the 308 is offered in a plethora of bullet weights and styles creating the potential for a wide range of hunting applications.

The 30-06 Springfield

Used as the standard US military round since its introduction in 1906 (hence the name, 30 for the caliber and 06 for the year it was accepted by the US military), the 30-06 is the powerhouse of the classic Central Ontario deer rounds.

The recoil of the 30-06 is substantial, especially when chambered in guns weighing less than seven pounds. With that recoil, however, the 30-06 (in most bullet varieties) carries the required 1000 foot-pounds of energy to kill a deer at 500 yards. Also, because of the 30-06's inherent flat shooting performance, those long shots are made even easier. Shots of that nature, however, should only be taken by experienced shooters who have ample range practice at such distances.

Another advantage of the 30-06, as with the 308 Winchester, is that rounds are available in a wide variety of bullet weights, allowing for a wide range of hunting applications.

Hunters who watch hydro lines, clear cuts and farm fields would do well to use a 30-06. It is also a fine moose gun out to 250 yards.

Give a hide, get a hat

Here's how to look after a green hide

WHENEVER A HUNTER shoots a moose or deer, the hides can be donated to Hats for Hides. The hides are distributed to various native communities. In exchange, the hunter receives a blaze orange hat.

Care for green hides

Quick and careful preparation of green hides dropped off by hunters is crucial to making everyone's conservation efforts pay off. There are three usual methods to care for green hides and preserve them until they get tanned.

1. Hides should be inspected for hair slippage, rotting or maggots, when the hunter brings them in. (if hair pulls out fairly easily from the hide, slippage has occurred.) if any of these occur, the hides are not acceptable or suitable for tanning.

2. Salting is the most common method used to preserve hides headed for "factory of chemical tanning processes. All meat and fat must be removed from the hide by scraping of cutting with great care taken not to damage the hide. Fine Salt works best as it rubs right into any remaining fibre on the inside of the hide whereas coarse-grain salt does not hold and tends to run of shake off. The entire hide must be salted right to the edges and while the amount of salt depends on the size of the hide, experts say to salt about 1/4 inch deep. Salted hides should be laid flat out, hair side down for a few days if they are to be folded into quarters or halves, till pick up.

3. Freezing hides is also a good method for preserving hides for tanning and frozen hides can be either chemically or "home" or smoke tanned. Salted hides, however cannot be smoke tanned the traditional way. As in salting, the hides must be scraped clean of all meat and fat before being folded into a large garbage bag which is then tied and placed in the freezer. To dry hides, the hide is nailed or tied along the outside edges only to a frame or sheet of plywood after it has been scraped clean of all meat and fat.

Do not make cuts or nicks in the hide when skinning. Do not put the hide in plastic. Even when salted, the hide will decay if no air reaches it. Only freeze hides that will be home tanned. Spoiled hides will not be accepted.

For more information, talk to a depot operator about the treatment of hides.

More details about the program, how to prepare hides and where they can be dropped off can be found at www.hatsforhides.com. Or call 1-888-873-3319 to find out where the nearest hides' depot is.

How to take care of your firearm

Many hunters are not sure if the work they want done should be done by a gunsmith or by themselves

Story by Mike Grinnell

EVERY YEAR FIREARMS come into my shop for repair or maintenance and perhaps addition of new sights, sling swivels, or stock pads or simply sighting-in. Many hunters and shooters are often not sure whether or not the work they want done should be done by a gunsmith or by themselves. I will explain what work should be done by an experienced gunsmith, what work can perhaps be done by the firearm owner and what additional services are available from the gunsmith.

I will also give some tips on preventive maintenance that will help keep the firearm working well and should avoid unnecessary trips to the gunsmith.

While you can do some work on your gun, there is also work that you should not even consider doing.

You should be able to do the following work:

- Repairs to small scratches on stocks
- Touch-up metal bluing on very small blemishes
- General cleaning — with disassembly up to the point as recommended by the manufacturer
- Attaching aftermarket sights and parts if the firearm does not need further work

Sighting-in

It is unwise, impractical, or perhaps unsafe for you to do the following work:

- Detailed disassembly beyond the manufacturer's recommendations
- Trigger adjustments
- Internal barrel or chamber cleaning beyond a general swab-out
- Stock repairs or modifications beyond basic cosmetic repairs
- Stock refinishing, especially where checkering is involved
- Sight changing or installations that aren't "clamp-on"
- Drilling or tapping
- Soldering or welding or using epoxies
- Installing sling swivels
- Stock tuning, including barrel bedding
- Barrel shortening, chamber work, or choke work
- Removing dents or burrs in any part of a barrel
- "Smoothering-up" an action
- Making a firearm more accurate

Diagnosis of malfunctions

- Any machine work or fitting of parts
- Magazine work
- Installation of "drop-in" or "no gunsmith required" parts — they aren't usually that way!

Author Mike Grinnell, in his workshop, is the owner of Mike's Gun Repair in Haliburton. Photo submitted.

- Experimenting with reloaded ammunition or loads that are unfamiliar
- Any custom modifications that change the operation or characteristics of the firearm
- Work on somebody else's firearm

(legal, insurance, and liability issues can surface)

Additional Gunsmith Services

There are other reasons you may want to take your gun to a gunsmith or at least contact a gunsmith:

Gunsmiths

- can advise on the types of firearms to buy (particularly on model construction and reliability); accessories; values; ammunition; ballistics; applicability to hunting situations

- are aware of new developments in the field of firearms and ammunition
- can identify old or rare firearms
- can obtain parts not readily available
- have sources of information not readily available to the general public
- have links to other gunsmithing services performed by specialists in the field
- are current on legal issues regarding firearms and can direct you to legal services
- are sources of information about shooting organizations, ranges, and shooting sports and events
- often will repair airguns
- will do or arrange for custom work
- can often do the work when you don't have the time

Preventive Maintenance

Preventive maintenance is work that is done to minimize the occurrence of future problems. As a firearm owner, you should make sure you do the following items and you should have fewer problems in the future:

- clean the barrel and chamber after each use of the gun and before storing after the season
- Use only products made for firearms maintenance
- always protect the muzzle of the barrel from dents
- never over-oil the internal mechanism of the firearm or spray oil into the mechanism in the hope of keeping it working
- always dry the metal of a firearm after exposure to rain or snow and always dry between the metal and any stocks or forearms
- never store a firearm in a gun case or an unvented storage cabinet
- always apply a good stockwax to wood stocks and seal any scratches
- store firearms muzzle down to prevent oil from running into wood areas
- keep screws and bolts tightened and apply a light coat of oil to the threads
- keep scope glass clean and covered.

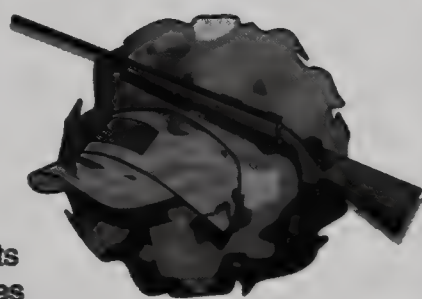

Safety

- When working on a firearm;
- Always make sure all firearms are completely unloaded and safe
- Have no ammunition in the area of the firearm
- Wear safety glasses
- Work in a clean and uncluttered area
- Work in a well-lit and well-ventilated area
- Have no distractions around you
- Do not be in a hurry
- Do not smoke and do not consume alcohol
- Read and understand manufacturers safety warnings
- Never assume or guess about the firearm.

Pins of gratitude

Marla and Lawrence VanLieshout presented Haliburton Legion President Jean Fletcher with 70 commemorative pins as a way of saying thank you to her Legion members. The pins, which show the intertwined flags of Canada and the Netherlands, are to honour the sacrifices of war veterans and the 7,600 Canadians who lost their lives in the battle for Holland during the Second World War. The VanLieshouts were only six years old when the Nazis invaded their homeland.

Branch 129 tops in zone attendance

The Zone Convention on Oct. 2 in Beaverton was a great success with all branches in zone having representation at this meeting. Branch 129 again led the pack with the largest number of delegates at the convention.

I have never attended a seminar or convention that I did not learn something new about Legion. I have made out a report of this convention for all executive members.

Not long ago we were told that the Sunday Brunches made very little profit for the Legion BUT I now have the figures to prove those doubting Thomases incorrect. From our last seven brunches we have been able to turn over to the Branch a profit of $2,195.33 for an average of $313.62 per brunch. Of course this is made possible only with the wonderful assistance of the almost 80 volunteers who work so faithfully for the Branch.

Congratulations and much thanks to our volunteers. It is heartwarming to be vindicated re the brunches and we have even deducted to cost of hydro from the income figures.

Saturday evenings. It is great and well worth attending your branch.

Your 2006 membership is now available. Become an Early Bird and pay your dues soon.

Thursday, October 13 is your General Meeting night. It starts at 7:30 p.m. Come out and learn what is happening at your Branch. This will also be visitation night for our Zone Commander Ian Colman. See you there.

Have you set aside October 23 for the Honours and Awards Night at Branch 129? Almost 150 members could receive awards for years of membership.

If you plan to attend call the Branch and let us know or drop in and put your name(s) on the sign-up sheet.

Weather was perfect for wedding

Eleanor Cooper
754-2388

Following Pam and Jaro Cooper's wedding, Evelyn (Cooper) Bradley and family were hosted by Louise Cooper for several days. Her daughter Lynn and son, Marc Domville, her son Mark and Colleen of Jasper, with their children, Lauren and Liam, and her son Scott and his wife Wendy and son, Austin of Thunder Bay all spent the rest of the weekend there. Weather was perfect for the wedding and continued into the following week.

At the wedding itself Earl piped the bridal party up the aisle of the large dock at Port Cunnington Lodge, followed by Jaro with Marilyn Cooper and Louise Cooper on either arm.

At the reception Pam's parents presented the bridal couple with a loaf of bread and salt following the Ukrainian custom to represent prosperity for the new home. Also a Ukrainian song of good wishes was sung after the dinner by the special few who knew the language. Lost of lovely touches made the evening very special and all present congratulated Pam and Jaro heartily during the joyous occasion.

Thanksgiving gathers people home in many families, some of these as follows: Nicholas Chumbley from Cambrian College in Sudbury at his parents', Dave and Leslie Chumbley, Angus and Rusty of Toronto with their parents Bob and Vicki, and Mary and Alex home from Toronto U of T with their parents, Vicki and Marty Sisson.

Kathleen Bain has been in Haliburton Hospital for the past weeks, and we wish her better health in the future.

The Tartan Show is still on at the Pritchard House until Oct. 13. Thanks to all who contributed their Scottish items: kilts, etc.

Be brave, Mickey

Veterinarian Laurie Brown administers a rabies shot to Victor Amisson's dog Mickey at the Dysart et al Fire Hall in Haliburton during the annual rabies clinic. There was also a clinic in Wilberforce. There were 460 animals that received the shot. The co-ordinated effort between the Quinte District Veterinarian Association and the Haliburton Kawartha Pine Ridge District Health Unit is held prior to hunting season once a year. Shots were $15 each. Amisson moved recently from Oshawa and was using the clinic for the first time.

Help needed

Respite workers and host families are needed to support children with developmental challenges, after school and on the weekends. Workers are paid $10 an hour and host families receive $40 per overnight visit. Workers are needed in the following areas:

Haliburton – on weekends from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with a 13-year-old boy who enjoys sports, fishing, boating, and "guy stuff."

Kinmount – host family for overnight respite once a month for a one-year-old boy needing lots of emotional support and interaction.

Wilberforce – once a week after school helping a six-year-old girl with homework and developing physical coordination.

Highland Grove – to lend a supportive ear and to be a role model for a young 15-year-old girl who enjoys outdoor activities, cooking and shopping.

Cardiff – Host family for overnight respite once a month for a friendly, polite 11-year-old boy who is full of energy.

Allsaw Flats – caring for a delightful one-year-old girl in her home one afternoon a week.

Haliburton – sharing time after school with a 14-year-old girl, modelling social interactions within the community and participating in "rock climbing."

Please consider sharing your interests and talents with a child who needs your support and friendship. Contact Marilou Mizzan, respite coordinator, at 457-5345 ext. 308.

Pretty, portable placemats

The Haliburton Highlands Quilt Guild donated 150 placemats to Community Care for its Wheels-on-Meals program. Those who purchased a meal between Oct. 3 and 7 received one complimentary placemat. Guild member Lynn Higgs Thompson, left, says quilters have been working on the mats for the past year and a half. On the right is Meals-on-Wheels co-ordinator Ida Schultz.

ADVERTISING SALES REPRESENTATIVE

Osprey Media is one of Canada's leading publishers of daily and weekly newspapers, magazines and specialty publications with 21 daily newspapers, 28 weekly newspapers and 30 magazines and specialty print publications in 46 markets across Ontario.

Osprey Media Group's local newspapers are entrenched in their communities and are well-recognized brand leaders.

Newspapers such as The Kingston Whig-Standard, The St. Catharines Standard, The Peterborough Examiner, The Barrie Examiner, The Orillia Packet & Times, The Enterprise Bulletin, The Midland Free Press and many others have been serving their communities for more than a hundred years.

The Haliburton County Echo and The Times, Minden require an enthusiastic, positive, bright and hard working person to join our sales team.

The successful candidate will play a key role in growing the newspapers' advertising revenues and client base.

Experience in advertising sales, especially in a print media environment, is a definite asset, however we will provide ongoing training to someone who brings the right qualities of a positive personality, lots of energy, excellent written and verbal communication skills, and a desire to succeed in a fast-paced, deadline-driven environment.

Key responsibilities:

- Represent the newspapers and associated special publications to a wide range of local business clients.
- Develop and implement strategies to help customers grow their businesses.
- Achieve account sales revenue targets
- Make cold calls to market the newspapers' services to local and regional businesses.

Qualifications:

- Proven customer service skills
- Excellent time management skills
- A creative, positive approach to problem solving
- A people person and team player
- A reliable vehicle

Send resume and covering letter to:

BRENTNALL, IRIS EVELYN - With great sorrow the family of Iris Brentnall announces her passing at Hyland Crest Nursing Home, Minden, on Monday, September 26, 2005 at the age of 83 years. She was the beloved wife of William McInnes (Bill) Brentnall who predeceased her in 1986. Dear mother of Carol Brentnall and her husband Larry Pratt of Minden and Alan and his wife Janie of Oshawa. Loving Gram of Steven, Robert (Sharon), Nicole (Rob) Tracy (Shane), and Lisa (Mark). Dearest Great-Gram to Christopher, Erika, Sarah, Alysha, Diana, Robert Jr., Connor, Eric, Nicola and Emma. Predeceased by her sister Elizabeth and her two brothers John and David. Iris was a resident of Scarborough for many years, moving to Oshawa in 1990. She had been a resident of Thorntonview Long Term Care in Oshawa for three years and just recently moved to Minden. A service was held in Oshawa on October 1, 2005. The family is very grateful for the excellent care given to her by the staff at Hyland Crest and for the support they received during this difficult time.
